Research that involves human subjects or participants raises unique and complex ethical, legal, social and political issues. Research ethics analyzes ethical issues that are raised when people and animals are involved as participants in research. Understanding the importance of these issues, college has constituted ethics committee. The main responsibility of a research ethics committee is to protect potential participants in the research, but it must also take into account potential risks and benefits for the community in which the research will be carried out. Its ultimate goal is to promote high ethical standards in research for health. Principal, St. Francis College has constituted Ethics Committee on Sep 5th, 2013 having following members from various organizations such as Universities, Institutes, NGO's, Principals of Colleges and Lawyers as advisory board members for institutional ethics committee.
